

SOLITARY WANDERER

Tales and Tips of a Solo Female Traveler

About the Solitary Wanderer

Hi! I'm Aleah, a freelance writer and editor who started traveling solo when I was 11 years old.

I started traveling internationally in 2008, using solo travel to take a break from my work then as a counselor to abused women and children.

As a full time digital nomad (since 2012), I have been to 33 countries (and counting), mostly traveling solo. I earn from my blog as well as from freelance editing and writing work.

Solitary Wanderer contains my guides and tips as well as narratives of my travels. I like adventurous activities, but I travel for architecture, food, history, and street art, too.

Selected Testimonials (from readers who are non-bloggers)

I've been reading all your blogs to get some ideas about the place that you visit. And to be honest, you inspired me to book a ticket to Batanes for my first solo trip outside the metro. Thank you so much, Solitary Wanderer! --Desiree, Philippines

Aleah it was your blog that inspired me and pushed me to do my solo trip. Thank you. I can't wait for your blog about South America! I was able to visit Europe too, your blog was my inspiration!! --Bernadette, Philippines

I slacked almost the whole day at the office reading and printing your blog write-ups, Aleah! I am very thankful to come across your blog. Keep travelling and inspiring others, Aleah you're doing a great job! --Millet, Singapore

A blog you wrote convinced me to go. --Doug B., Canada
